The diagram illustrates the experimental setup. A subject is seated at a table, looking at a video screen. A video camera is positioned above the screen to record the subject's response. A light source is positioned to the left of the screen. The screen displays a visual feedback system where the subject's hand position is monitored. The subject's hand is positioned on a table, and the video screen shows the hand's position relative to a target. The video camera captures the hand's position and the target's position, and the video screen displays this information to the subject. The light source illuminates the hand and the target, and the video camera captures the resulting image. The video screen displays the image, and the subject sees the hand's position relative to the target.
